

12 said yes.

8 showed up.

You paid for 12 chairs.

4 fixes. Exact words inside.

Example, not data.

Why nobody cancels, but still doesn't come

- Saying yes took one word.
- Cancelling takes an awkward message.
- Not coming takes nothing.

Our reading, not a study.

Put a deadline on the seat

Your seat is held until Thursday, 6pm.

Confirm by then and it's yours.
After that, I offer it on.

Why

A deadline makes them choose, once.
Fewer yeses. Truer ones.

Turn “the course” into Saturday

Send it the day they say yes.

Saturday, 9:00, Hall B.

Bring your laptop and ID.

By 4pm you'll have built a budget.

Why

“The course” is a vague idea.

Saturday 9:00 is an appointment.

Two days before, ask for one word

Hi Sara, Saturday 9:00 is on.
Is your seat still yours?
Reply YES and I'll keep it.
If not, tell me. No problem.

Why

A polite way out frees the seat.
While you can still refill it.

No reply by evening? Send: still coming?

Keep three names ready

Write down who asked after you filled.

A seat opened for Saturday.
It's yours if you
reply by 6pm.

Why

Freed on Thursday, a seat refills.

Found empty on Saturday, it's gone.

